

About your instructor

Will Taylor is a now-retired physician, trained initially as a conventional family practice M.D., who has practiced & taught homeopathic medicine since 1992, including 11 years as director of the homeopathy program at the National College of Natural Medicine in Portland Oregon; a school for professional homeopaths in NYC; and a postgraduate program in the Czech Republic. He has practiced general family and homeopathic medicine in Bethel, South Freeport and Blue Hill Maine, and in Portland Oregon. Although Will has recently retired his license to practice medicine following a stroke in 2014, and can therefore no longer offer personal medical advice, he continues to teach in a desire to pass on the experiences gained in a rich professional life. Will has a passion for homeopathy, and is hopeful of passing his passion along to you, so that you too might feel at home with homeopathy.
